G TO SCHNEIDER'S FOR OUR PICTURES.

The Editor's Wooing.

We love thee, Ann Maria Smith,
And in thy condescension
We see a future full of joys
"Too numerous to mention."

There's Cupid's arrow in thy glance,

That by pure love's coercion
Has reached our very heart of hearts

And "asked for one insertion."

With joy we feel the blissful pain,
And ere our passion rages
We freely place thy love upon

The "list of our exchanges."

There's music in thy lowest tone,
And silver in thy laughter,
And truth—but "we will give the full

Particulars hereafter."

Oh! we would tell thee of our plans

All obstacles to shatter,

But we are full just now, and have

"A press of other matter."

Then let us marry, queen of Smiths

Without more hesitation,

The very thought doth give our blood

"A larger circulation."

Territorial News.

From the Prescott Miner of the 14th inst. we extract the following:

W. V. Goodrich was murdered by Mohave Indians, at a point on the river bottom, about 8 miles below Fort Mohave, on the 4th inst. These Indians, to the number of 200, were in arms, under a murderous chief named Choravai, threatening to murder several other whites, principally Messrs. Sallsberry, Mayburn, Baker and Harper, who had been notified of said intention by friendly Indians, in time to save themselves by flight. The murdered man came to the Territory sometime in 1863, as a soldier in Captain Atchison's company, California Volunteers. Upon being discharged, he settled near Fort Mohave, and, up to the time of his death, conducted himself in a very proper manner. He was always friendly and kind to the Indians. There being but few troops at the post, and but few citizens on the river, it was natural that the whites should feel uneasy, but as Steelhoo—a leading chief—appeared to be faithful, and as Capt. Thompson and his small force stood ready to do their duty, a warrant was issued for the arrest of the murderous chief, who refused to obey it. We, of course, do not know what steps General Crook has taken in the matter, other than that Lieutenant Ross—one of his aids—has gone down.

The same paper says: "Since our last, the days have been pretty warm; nights cool. Frost came very near being distilled on the night of the 9th, but early morning showed no frost anywhere on the heavy dew which spangled grass, corn and vegetables. The night of Wednesday, the 11th, was, at 11 o'clock, when we retired, quite cool, and it did not surprise us, next day, when we learned that frost had left its mark in Miller and Mint valleys, and on Burned ranch, but, thank God, it was a light frost and did little, if any damage; at least around Prescott.

Brother Marion snacks his lips over some grapes and peaches received from and raised in Wickenburg.

The first instalment of diamond hunters furnished by Prescott, left that town on the 9th inst.

The demand for houses in Prescott is said to be good.

Our friend Col. Jas. M. Barney, in company with Dr. Bendell, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, was in the vicinity of Prescott on the 14th inst.

The Tucson Citizen of the 21st furnishes us with the following interesting items:

Wednesday, Buckhart & Freckley's, Peck's, Murietta's and Salazar's teams got here with freight from Arizona City.

Up to yesterday, the authorities of Tucson made out and delivered 330 deeds and received the charges thereon. The amount received is about $2,600, and the average cost per lot is $7 88.

Governor Safford left for Huachuap mining District last Wednesday. He will go via Salt River valley and Prescott, and may be absent six weeks.
